

CHURCH OF ENGLAND GIRLS' SCHOOL MAGAZINE

The birds were all so bright and cheery,
The cricket sang beneath the ground,
Everyone was making merry,
All the earth was full of sound.

WINTER.

The river was covered with ice,
And the ground was covered with snow,
And the birds had left this land,
And icy winds did blow.
Not a sound was heard,
For the air was silent and still,
Except for the grind, grind, grind,
Of the ever grinding mill.

—VAL. ROWLAND.

AT EVEN.

The sun in sinking in the west,
The birds are homewards flying,
The flowers fold their petals blest,
The tall gum-trees are sighing.
The lambs frisk by their mothers' sides,
The horses stand there dreaming,
The butterfly then homeward glides,
And the city lights are gleaming.
The children all run in from play,
They long for night and peace,
Their laughter and their chatter gay,
Will all at even cease.
